Bumper stickers; a silent but profound voice at UC

By JULIE SENTER

Most discrimination at UC occurs because of students’ problems, according to a spokeswoman for the Center for American Women and Children (CWC).

Linda Sattin, the center’s assistant director, explained that the center advises students who have been affected by such problems. “We have a lot of people who are sensitive about race, gender, sexual orientation, religious beliefs, and the like,” she said.

The CWC sponsors a number of programs that help students organize and help women with problems who are in a minority group.

Among those are a variety of courses, including:

- Our Bodies and Our Selves: a women’s health course dealing with abortion, pro-choice, birth control, and self-awareness.
- Women and Madness: a psychology course concentrating on the ways women are portrayed in the institution of psychiatry.
- Women in Philosophy: a philosophy course concentrating on the female character.
- Women in Psychology: a psychology course concentrating on the female character.

Linda Sattin is the director of the Women Helping Women. Women Helping Women is a group of about 50 women who work to handle the problems that may arise in a college setting. They are trained in legal aspects, public policy work, and dealing with psychological problems. If a woman is raped and has to go to the hospital, they will send someone to go with her to make sure she needs what she wants. She said that the main purpose of the group is to help the student, 90 percent of whom are female, and not to make decisions on the problem.

Lazars are a speaking chair of Ohio and Kentucky and is getting ready to work for the campaign in the campaign fund. He said his campaign is being financed with donations primarily from students. "We don’t have any millions,” he added, "but we have $100 bills.”

SANDER DINING HALL - SIDDALL DINING HALL

During the winter months when there is a continuous cycle of freezing and thawing, many vehicles are likely to become trapped in the snow, ice, and mud in the campus parking lots. In recent weeks, conditions have been especially hazardous in some of the newer lots, where the ground is still unsettled. The Physical Plant has spent many hours applying gravel to help firm the ground, and the Parking Office has used its three vehicles to free over 300 cars and prevent several accidents. Despite these efforts, drivers may still find difficulty in moving their vehicles from the lots.

Students request condom machine

By BOB BOWMAN

The Calhoun Hall Condom Committee, encouraged by members of the Ohio Revised Code, is lobbying in favor of the placement of a condom-dispensing machine in Calhoun Hall to help students avoid pregnancy and sexually transmitted diseases.

Serafina Sereda, chairman of the committee, said he has made a proposal to the Calhoun Hall Executive Committee (CSEC), the student governing board for the dormitory.

Serafina said the machine would be installed "to cut down on the YD rate." He also said that the machine would be installed "to do down the VTR." It was not clear what VTR stood for.

Serafina did not know the YD rate at OSU. However, the Student Health Services reported 93 cases of venereal disease in the spring semester.

Providing birth control is not a major concern behind the proposal. Instead, the committee is concerned about the possible spread of diseases through the use of government contraceptives, Serafina said.

Gilliagan petitions being used for fund-raising

COLUMBUS (AP) - Official nominating petitions for Governor Gilligan are already being filled out and will be filed, his campaign manager said Monday. The Gilligan effort has sent out over 50,000 more in a fund-raising effort.

Eugene F. O'Grady said more than 90,000 Ohioans have already signed petitions for Governor Gilligan's 1982 and 1980 election campaigns and petitions for the Democratic party candidates list.

The mailing's encouraged recipients to gather names for fund-raising purposes.

The petition package contained a solicitation for contribution of $1 or more, a check-off card for recipients who do not want to make a contribution and a check for the card.

According to O'Grady, several lists were not screened to remove the names of state employees. He said some may have received petitions and should file the check card.

The check-out card will allow persons to discontinue the campaign, and is not intended to intimidate state employees, he said. It will be used in future mailings to eliminate names.

Judie D. Nolan, a Democratic candidate for Governor, accused Gilligan of trying to force employees to contribute to his re-election campaign.

State law forbids anyone from soliciting political contributions from public employees. It also forbids those employees from participating in fund-raising activities.

Library planning

A work day today the Library Planning Advisor, Mr. Robert A. Heil, and a small group of students and faculty members engaged in making proposals for the specific functions of the building.

We, too, have some recommendations to make, as we fear that the joy of having a new building to fill may be tinged with doubt about the originality of the plans. We have many plans for the buildings.

Financial considerations

Libraries have always been considered essential to the academic community, but the cost of building a new library can be overwhelming. It is important to consider the long-term implications of such a project.

Open forums

The new library will be equipped with state-of-the-art technology, including a large computer lab and a media center. In the future, we hope to incorporate a more flexible layout to accommodate different types of events.

Three in disagreement with abortion legislation

There is a growing movement among young people to challenge the traditional views of abortion. They argue that life begins at conception and that the right to abortion should not be taken for granted.

All heads the size of basketballs. Many people do we know that correctly picked the winner of the Notre Dame at UCLA game and picked it by the right score.
