Pomp and Circumstance Changed, Relevancy Theme of Inauguration

By Linda Broggola
Staff Reporter

A typical inauguration ceremony presents the traditional “fanfare and circumstance” of processions, bagpipes, introductions, speeches, and a great deal of attention to many important dignitaries. The inauguration of Warren G. Benson at UC’s 19th presidency, however, will be a “meaningful change from the traditional” order to become more relevant to the university community,” explained John E. Small, chairman of the inauguration committee.

Instead of introductions and speeches, Benson’s inauguration focuses on special events and musical performances.

Ohio Governor John J. Gilligan and UC President Benson will both also be among the dignitaries in attendance. Other members of the party set the drums of the UC Concert Jazz Band, and a party of older men with the UC Band, will be on hand to take part in the ceremony.

The deans of the various groups on campus, the deans of the student body, and the president’s party are the deans of the deans of the district community. Other members of the district community, including the district community, committee on the regional community, and the office of the district community, will be on hand to take part in the ceremony.

The plans, which include a process of coming about of the entire audience, the students of the university, the board of governors, the newly elected members of the university, the faculty members, the student body, and the community, will be planned out thoroughly.

The search for a new director of the university continues. It is filled within the first week.

Frank T. Purdy, vice president for Development and Community Relations, is in the process of interviewing applicants for the position. Purdy feels that it is an exceptionally important function of the University to have a person who has both a deep understanding of the operation of the University and a keen appreciation of the importance of the position.

The University will need a background in administration, in dealing with media, and a good understanding of the importance of the president and other board members.

Bennis Says Students Reflect a Loneliness

by James Chao Staff Reporter

"The students who come to see me are not happy. They don't seem to know where to go." states President W. A. Bennis.

Bennis initiated in his office open house Oct. 6, numbers of students and faculty, some representing campus organizations have stopped in to discuss their problems or just to meet the president.

From meeting these students and faculty in his office and during various dates, President Bennis finds that students report two major aspects: a feeling of philosophy department will sponsor two public lectures by Putnam. Pres. Newsletter
Administrative Goals Explored

The following is President Warren Brodhead's second Newsletter to the University Community.

At the October meeting of the Board of Directors I discussed a number of broad administrative goals for my first year in the Presidency. I would like to share them with you.

1. Developing our Human Resources. 1. Selection of key administrative officers. 2. Dean of College of Education and Home Economics, Dean of Summer School and the appointment of Arts and Sciences Dean. 2. Assessment of key academic and administrative leaders. 3. Development of top administrative offices into a highly collaborative team from the faculty. 4. Establishing and clarifying to the University community the role of the Office of Planning and Policy Analysis.

C. A reorganization study including careful attention to: the viability of the present structure, to the proper objectives, and the appropriate place for the research office.

D. Development of a planning and evaluation process that will lead to a five-year plan by September 1972. This process should involve a wide cross-section of the University community with a possible condition of external consultation, and should also result in a speedy, careful, and accurate information system. Planning the future of any higher education must include consideration of the following questions: 1. What principal forces in terms of population pressure, economic growth, technological changes, and superpower requirements will play upon UC? What responsibilities would UC have to assume? 2. What changes should and should not be anticipated in UC as a community in its style of life, and in its working relations with faculty and students? 3. What changes are necessary and desirable in the content of what the University community learns through research and teaching? 4. How do we best serve our campus community? How do we consider the interests of the beyond the immediate years of educational life, i.e., 19-25?

E. Developing an educational climate that will reaffirm learning as a central focus. 2. Will improve the climate necessary for educational growth. 3. Will improve services of University community. 4. Will release the energies and talents of all faculty, students, and administrators.

F. Strengthening community relations.

G. Developing an affirmative action program. 1. Help the University to make the most of its human resources. 2. In cooperation with the Board of Education to develop a more coherent tradition of education.

H. Helping to strengthen and develop more coherence of governance mechanisms.

I. Working closely with the Board in order to secure its understanding and support of needed changes.

J. Continuing to develop the University into greater national prominence. To do this, we need to: 1. Establish (by students and faculty) teaching quality and systematically award excellence in teaching. 2. Involve students more deeply in faculty research. 3. Improve the quality of research. 4. Give better support to faculty publication in adequate administrative service. 5. Develop a strategy for maximization of efficiency and economic mission in recruiting and retaining new faculty. 6. Establish a systematic process of evaluation in order to encourage the development of strong programs and terminate inadequate ones.

Student Decision

The potential problem of whom is responsible for the regulation of University residence hall visitation hours was once again thrust into the limelight following an administrative decision not to extend visitation hours during Homecoming weekend.

This year, the president and the Board directors presently make the final decision what visitation hours are in University housing. This process of determining hours by people who are not affected by their own decision is unjust and should be immediately changed.

The president should decide for themselves what the visitation hours should be. Students living in campus dormitories are more than enough to decide upon hours which affect their own conscientiousness.

I call upon the University to immediately adopt a policy allowing self-determination of residence hall students to establish visitation hours.

Faculty Apathy

An All-University Faculty meeting was held Thursday in Wilson Auditorium. This was the first regularly scheduled meeting of the academic year. This was also the first time President Warren Beasdi had the opportunity to address the entire faculty.

I consider these factors should be of importance to all faculty members, over 2,000 faculty members. Nevertheless, only a small number attended the meeting, approximately 400. Some faculty members noted that the turnout, about 16 percent better than the past.

In his speech Dr. Beasdi praised the faculty and said, "I am encouraged with the spirit of the faculty to move with me." Perhaps the spirit was with the assembled, and concerns of the University was shown in their presence, but the majority of the faculty showed their apathy.

Letter to the Editor

The survival of critical medical services depends on the passage of the 2,831 bill to reenact levy. A defeat would mean the closing of Duke Memorial Hospital as well as serious cuts to General Hospital and the College Hospital.

The entire community greatly benefits from these important services. A defeat would not affect such a outlook. The News Record once again strongly urges everyone voting to support the hospital levy by voting YES.

The following is a letter addressed to Professor Ronald Brown.

Dear Dr. Brown:

Your letter to Faculty and Staff of Oct. 15, 1971 is an interesting example of a campaign that has been used to achieve a goal. A justifiable, if not "non-political" stance of the University is as much a right as the right of any other group to have their liberal demands with due process and due attention.

These appeals have been inadequately handled by the university's tendency to overuse other media, such as the University moves media and through The News Record.

On the other hand, I as a faculty member am told, on page 13 of the Faculty Facts, that I may not use my University affiliation in writing a letter to a magazine or newspaper.

In the past, this University has been accused, by some teachers and others, of a hypocritical attitude on the part of their political and ethical Political involvement is a legitimate part of the University, but what we are concerned about is much more important and if the college campus is to represent a Christian, the moral community in which it is located, it must not be a place of discrimination. The lack of Senate objectivity in matters that lay ahead.

The Student Body Vice-President has editorial “Quo Vadimus?”, has put forth a rather hackneyed theory of limitations of such petty criteria as good and evil, certainly is not an original one; nevertheless, one must understand just how this particular one; nevertheless, one must understand just how this particular

The Continuing Education Club is for people whose education has been interrupted for some reason and now revised to return.

This club began two years ago when a group of returning students organized a small unit for advice on the problems of returning to school. Mrs. Campbell, assistant dean of women, is the club’s advisor. A handbook has been published each year for returning students which includes various helpful hints from correspondence information to a section on campus life.

The club which meets every other Wednesday at noon, will meet at 12:15 p.m. in the Queen City Room, TUSC, tomorrow. The speaker will be Mrs. Jane Gavin who will speak on such items:

Field Trip To Sewage Plant Set

A field trip covering the Miami Creek Sewage Treatment Plant is planned by the Geography Department and offers those interested the opportunity to see various aspects of the plant.

Kim Grasha, geography professor and administration offices up to and including the president, will be in attendance to answer questions from the audience.

Among positive, innovative methods tried and evaluated in the student's own classes, Graha states:

1. The writing center: provides a check on content and solicits the student's opinions on areas where the instructor considers weaknesses.

2. Group exercises: new in the group, does the student present a project of their own, then having them develop and improve their skills at problem solving and solutions.

3. Teacher of the day—author and students sharing responsibility for that class section, everything from lecturing to demonstrating to showing films.

4. Grade policy—allowing students to say to students that a competent performance on all activities will earn them at least a C. Those scoring below a C have three options: to do remedial work and bring the grade up to a C, to offer F or Grade, or withdraw from the course with a W.

According to Dr. Graha, these methods encourage students to develop skills in addition to content acquisition. He finds that more students are more “turned on” with these procedures and the “good-poor” distinction begins to disappear.

Whether it was Alan Arkin leap ing for an elusive Audrey Hepburn, the absence of foul weather, free popcorn and cotton candy, the Flea Market, a financially successful concert, the traditional parade down Clifton Avenue, or the crowning of Janet Mayer as Homecoming Queen ’71, “Celebrate Homecoming ’71” is today a memory. Officially beginning Thursday night with “Wait Until Dark”’s film emceed by Bob Shreve, Homecoming ’71 took shape Friday morning with the Flea Market and culminated Friday night with the Luther Allison Blues Band and Ike and Tina Turner in concert at the Fieldhouse.

The traditional Homecoming Parade made its way down Clifton Avenue Saturday afternoon. Over sixty units participated; awards given to the outstanding floats in each division.

The President’s Cup for the outstanding float in the parade was awarded this year to Sigma Phi Epsilon in the men’s division; Phi Kappa Tau and Kappa Delta in the combined division. Other float winners included Zeta Tau Alpha in the women’s division, Phi Kappa Theta in the men’s division, and Theta Chi-Chi Omega and Delta Tau Delta Alpha Chi Omega in the combined divisions.

Climaxing homecoming weekend was the crowning of Janet Mayer, a sophomore in the College of Education and Home Economics, majoring in Child Development. President Warren Bennis and Jane Bellamy, 1970 Homecoming Queen, crowned Miss Mayer. One demurrer; Homecoming spirits were dampened by the 45-21 defeat the Bearcats suffered at the hands of Memphis State.

Matteran and the Latin-American Dance Company will be presented at 8:30 p.m. on Friday, Nov. 5 at Wilson Auditorium.

Matteran, who is a leading artist in the field of ethnic dance, is also an authority on folklore and dance customs. After mastering the demanding 200-year-old traditions of Indian dance, his well-established company has included in its national and international tours the classical and regional dances of many other lands. All are given in costume, native costumes.

In the first half of the program, there are five dances of India, including the "Bharatan," (one of my favorite dances) displaying the art forms of many regions. After intermission, there will be dances of Tahiti, Hawaii, Japan, Brazil, Latin America, and Spain.

Matteran received his bachelor's degree from the University of Mexico, and in 1935 he received his doctorate in electrical engineering from the University of California. He has lectured in the United States, Japan, Israel, Latin America, and many other countries. After intermission, the program will include one from each of the six countries Matteran will visit in South America. They are the Andes, Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, Chile, and Argentina.

Two free lecture-demonstrations by the company are scheduled at 10:30 a.m. Thursday and 11:30 a.m. Saturday, in the Great Hall of UC. The performance for the public is on Saturday in the first act. The program will include one from each of the six countries Matteran will visit in South America. They are the Andes, Bolivia, Paraguay, Peru, Chile, and Argentina.

New System
Automatic Law Library Set

Two years is what it takes to use a desktop telephone, run your fingers on a typewriter, and you have access to a "law library" of considerable extent.

What is it and how does it work?

This new law research tool, developed by Mead Data Central Inc. of Dayton, Ohio, is nothing of its kind in the United States, or even the world. The system, entitled Ohio Bar Automated Research (OBAR), contains all Ohio statutes, case constitutional law, and related research. The information, and Mrs. Cassidy, is housed in memory banks of two computers at Mead Data Central in Dayton, Ohio, and Washington, D.C.

The system was initiated by the SMC Comm. Organizes

Plans to encourage anti-war sentiment such as a prayer rally are scheduled by the Student Mobilization Committee (SMC), according to Effi Eifert, SMC-coordinating chairman for the UC campuses. The prayer rally is hoped to be held outside the UC this Friday, Nov. 5 at a pre-scheduled date.

Effi Eifert also covered, during the lecture, that a lawyer requests' to establish contact. Then she decided to research all cases in the Ohio Court of Appeals dealing with or containing the terms "labor" and labor unions.

"The computer's information," said Effi, "includes each lawyer's name as in legal aid clinics," she added.

The corporate representative to the Ohio Bar's request, to refer back to a case done, ship to the next case or tell the computer to find cases dealing with or related cases.

"Lawyers may be able to devote more time to legal services such as in legal aid clinics," she added.

A lawyer is not able to take the advantage, declared Mrs. Cassidy. "That lawyers deal with ideas and concepts, something that is thought of other lawyers to handle cases they may come across in their work."
