Typical student finds atypical problems

By MICHAEL B. COLEMAN

Diane Elsner is a typical UC student. She is an intelligent, warm, and friendly woman majoring in psychology at the College of Arts and Sciences. She enjoys going to the movies and spending time reading books when she isn't attending to Steve Wonder or Paul Simon. Diane is determined to fulfill her requirements in her major, but she is not the type to continue in higher education. She took the classes she needed when she needed them and is now working toward her college degree.

Diane feels comfortable with her instructors, but they do not offer much assistance because of their schedules. She finds it difficult to take a load of classes and attend class at the same time. She has found that taking certain classes with which she feels she could properly handle, she feels more comfortable.

In the words of Diane, "I can't talk to the instructors, because I know I am capable of fulfilling all my requirements toward my major."

Although Diane is not a full-time student, she does have a part-time job as a tutor. She has found that tutoring can be a valuable experience for both the tutor and the student. She finds it helpful to work with students who are having difficulty in a particular subject.

Diane finds that the general public looks upon blind students as a separate category of people. She feels that the general public does not understand the strengths and weaknesses of blind people. She feels that the general public is not willing to learn about the strengths and weaknesses of blind people and that they need to be educated.

Diane feels that not only employers, but the general public should look at the strengths and weaknesses of blind people rather than their handicaps.

Diane feels that the public attitude toward blind students should be "fixed" or "set" because it would not be of much help to a student of his ability and cooperation.

Diane finds that as a blind student on campus, she is off campus. She has found that it is not an easy task to interact with the public. She finds that it is difficult to interact with the public when she is not able to see them.

That's the name of a food co-op in Cincinnati. Approximately three years ago, several friends pooled their money to rent a house and started a co-op. The co-op, run by students at the University of Cincinnati, is located at the desk as an ad

A poster is up on a bulletin board in the student center. The poster reads: "Women are right staffing groups work in the middle of the night and on weekends."

It is atotal of the desk as an ad

The poster is up to keep the office clean. There are two long rows of shelves in the room, each containing a variety of items. The shelves are filled with books, canned goods, and other supplies. The poster is clearly visible and appears to be in good condition with no visible signs of wear or damage.

The text on the poster states: "Women are right staffing groups work in the middle of the night and on weekends."

This poster is likely intended to promote awareness and appreciation for the work done by staffing groups who work late at night and during weekends. These groups are responsible for keeping the co-op running smoothly, ensuring that the needs of the community are met, and maintaining the cleanliness and organization of the co-op's facilities.

However, the poster may also be seen as a way to promote gender equality and acknowledge the contributions of women in these roles. It highlights the importance of recognizing and valuing the work that women do, particularly in positions that are often overlooked or undervalued.

In conclusion, the poster "Women are right staffing groups work in the middle of the night and on weekends." serves as a reminder of the essential work done by these groups and encourages recognition and appreciation for their efforts.

The career center provides resources and guidance to students at the university, helping them navigate the transition process and make informed decisions about their academic and professional future. This example highlights the importance of seeking guidance and support when faced with challenges or uncertainties in one's academic or career path.

Come for the hills and valleys of your feet.

Senator Jeff Bingaman (D-N.M.) has introduced a bill that would make it easier for the U.S. military to pay for the costs of women's health care services, such as reproductive health care. The bill would authorize the Department of Defense to pay for these services, even if they are not covered by other health insurance plans. This is a significant step towards ensuring that women in the military have access to the same level of reproductive health care as other women.

This legislation is important because it addresses the needs of women in the military, who may face unique challenges when it comes to accessing reproductive health care. It recognizes the importance of providing comprehensive health care for all service members, regardless of their gender or sexual orientation.

Overall, this bill represents a positive step towards promoting equal access to reproductive health care for women in the military. It highlights the need for continued efforts to ensure that all women have the resources and support they need to make informed decisions about their reproductive health.

Great misconceptions

By BENNETT A. NEIDAM

I am replying to Joe Conley’s article, “Of Kansas and Watergate,” which appeared in The News Record, April 27, 1974. I suppose I do believe that this is the letter I have painted, and that I am expounding a few students seemingly apathetic.

I am not an “old fogey” out of step with the times. What happened when “desert rats” stormed in from the back door to the unliberated multitude...that unliberated folk who we matched with notions on his ego...that Fertility-jack-Winchester

I hope you will not react to this, defensively.

Don Johnson decided not to run, he watched Watergate on TV with the rest of us, and he probably will do the same thing next time.

Perhaps, my disdain for the character I portrayed in my column was a little too subtle to be understood. I then decided to put the column in context as you did in your article, but...I am not an “old fogey” out of step with the times. Baseball Bearcats vie for NCAA berth

By HAROLD PERLSTEIN

“We’ve definitely in contention for an NCAA spot now,” said Coach Glenn Sample after his baseball team hosted Thomas More yesterday and came away with a 5-3 victory.

UC defeated Thomas More 5 to 3 in the second game of a doubleheader. In the first game, UC won 8 to 2. Ohio University was a doubleheader. They won both games.

Dale Smith, UC’s pitcher and catcher, pitched a complete game. He gave up only four hits, all singles players, Dave Van Vorhees, Tom Coffaro, John Dzakovic, Tom Roberts, and Ron Grant. Suzanne Rosconi, and Ron Grant.

Glenn Sample after his baseball-tryout in the eighth inning so Andy game to hand Ray Perino another tough setback. Penno went the distance, giving up only two hits, but still lost 3 to 2 on two unearned runs in the fifth inning.

“Sometimes you’d rather be lucky than good,” said Sample of Perino’s performance.

At Louisville, UC came back from a 6 to 2 deficit in the first game to defeat the Cardinals 10 to 6 in extra innings. The deciding blow in the game was a two-run homer by Terry Merino.

“I am most impressed with the win. We overpowered the Eastern Kentucky University. We have something to prove to the rest of the conference. We’re going to start off strong,” said Sample.

“We’ve been to the NCAA spot before, so we know what it’s like to win.

UC imported Mike Czarnecki from Western Ohio University. He has seen little action with regard to the two starting pitchers. When asked how long the current season will last, Sample replied, “There is a good possibility that it won’t be much longer. This Thursday, we play to travel to the University of Kentucky. They’ll give us all we can handle."

Poetry and Science Fiction Reading

Poetry

“Nobody ever gave her favorite actress a bouquet of rose stalks neatly severed at both ends. Why? Because roses are meant to bloom. To be fully fulfilled.

Poetry needs to flower. It needs to find a response in people’s hearts. Until poetry sings in your heart, the only tears you can cry are powdered tears, and your smiles are lipstick smiles.

The easiest way to get poetry into the heart is through the eyes. Face to face. Charles Cameron says now you can get to face-to-face with some hearts. And read them his happiness.”

Film traces of witch

By TERRI RHODES

“If a girl wishes for a boy’s love, she makes a wish on her birthday, she spins and bathed and north of the boy. Did she make a wish, which she may have on a moonspade. And when the moon is at its first quarter, she must pin on that spot and say ‘I love you, and when your image shall appear, you’ll follow me as a dog follows a black.”

It’s a different approach and so is Diane and Sheldon Rock’s method of filmmaking. Their documentary, “Witch, Which of Familiar,” will be shown at noon tomorrow in the Great Hall of the Women’s Studies Women’s College. Admission is free.

The film draws what its documentary is supposed to do—tells the truth. And the truth is that Patti is much more of a bitch. She and her dimly

The documentary is occasionally interrupted with Patti’s profound commentaries on life. “I’ve wiped out dead I’ve had and I can’t get out. If it’s going to make me happy, I go. I must know what I mean.”

Neither is Patti a professional, nor are her words the basis for the film. What is the main theme of the film is the visibility of the Witch’s presence. The film is a commentary on the gypsy-like quality of Patti and her surroundings. Going into the room to the dark, rich, passionate colors of the film and Patti’s color of the surrounding landscape. In one scene of Patti’s dancing in a red dress, she is supposedly to give the audience a sense of what it feels like to be Patti.

Her face is a mix of interesting angle characters. They do a lot of face-to-face with their viewers, locking her tips for 90 seconds and later a long shot taken from inside a cave with Patti’s blackened profile set against a moon.

University to give DeFunis symposium

The Office of University Commitmente-Human Resources (OUCHR) is in recognition of the importance of the DeFunis Case, recently considered by the Supreme Court, is sponsoring a DeFunis Symposium on May 13, 1974, 7:00 P.M. at the Symposium, the decision. Three students show their reactions to the instructor's demonstrations. Pictured left to right are Rose McCuey, Ann Rolwing, Barbara Mattia, Candie Lincoln, Karen Mack, and Laura Pedone.

Richard Jackson, UC law student and OUCHR Graduate Assistant, is coordinating the Symposium. Edward Mearns, law psychology expert and former dean of the University Law College, University Executive Vice President Robert O'Neil, and Law School Dean Joseph Samuel Wilson will speak at the Symposium. O'Neil, who has submitted a brief supporting the University of Washington on behalf of CLEO to the Supreme Court and reviewed litigations on “Preferential Treatment” in Yale Law Journal, 1971, will argue the University of Washington's position in the Symposium. Wilson, who has been chairman of the UC Law School Admissions Committee for some time, has consented to argue the DeFunis position.

For the sake of realism, advocates will be presenting their arguments before a panel of Student Court and law school judges who will be free to interrupt and ask questions as does the Supreme Court. After the presentation of arguments, the judges will retire to chambers to render a mock decision.

Let's Get It Straight

A "FUN" WORLD

Today's world offers you more excitement and opportunity than at any other time in history. But along with all this there are some new problems. All this "fun" may come to you long before you are ready for it. To be successful in this age of freedom and opportunity, you must learn to control your biological instincts without fear of the repression that you believe that Christ's teachings demand. Only a very immature person insists on running with the gang, freeing himself to indulge your biological instincts without fear of the repression that you believe that Christ's teachings demand.
