It had been equipped with an extensive refrigeration unit and capable of producing extremely low temperatures throughout the structure.

Professor Carr had alleged earlier that the 121-F. U. O. bodies were being stored in a refrigeration unit in what he said was "Hangar 18"—a description which matched what Hudson visited.

The Air Force acknowledged that a complex refrigeration unit had been removed from the building—but claimed that the low-temperature equipment was used to study extracts from subsoil under base.

Ann Landers supports decriminalizing marijuana

Ann Landers, the most widely syndicated advice columnist in the world, has been a voice for the legalization of marijuana for many years. In a recent letter to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), Landers called for the complete decriminalization of marijuana.

In a letter to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML), Landers called for the complete decriminalization of marijuana. The letter was written in response to a recent article by rolled marijuana in a Massachusetts newspaper.

"I have long been an advocate of marijuana legalization," Landers wrote. "I believe that marijuana users should not be criminalized and that the drug should be regulated like any other agricultural product."

Landers' letter was published in the November 1974 issue of the NORML Magazine, and it has been widely quoted in both the public and in the media.

"I am encouraged by the growing number of states that are considering marijuana legalization," Landers continued. "I hope that one day marijuana will be legal in all 50 states."

Landers' support for marijuana legalization is not new. She has been a vocal advocate for the drug for many years, and her column has included many articles on the subject.

The adventure of Alice in economlandy

By Mike Deser

Moments after their skill attempts to communicate with the little man in the revolving door, the group is surrounded by chatty white porcelain. Alice found herself in a pretty oval room, in the midst of some rather strange characters and ideas.

"Shh," whispered the Dodo. "These experts are discussing the economic strategy which will put us out of the recession.

"You mean inflationary period," countered the red queen. "We are not in a recession, we are in an inflationary period," and she repeated it again, then went on to explain a few times and handed it to a press secretary in between.

Over at a table, several of the experts were engaged in heated discussion, which attracted Alice's attention, since they seemed to be saying the same thing, but disagreeing with each other's conclusions at the same time.

"If you grab a piece of the mushroom on this side, the demand grows smaller, so we must feed the inflationary rooms," said one expert, as he dipped his tea in a small pool.

"Excuse me sir, for correcting you," Alice said, "but you have chosen the wrong side of the mushroom.

"How utterly rich and foolish," cried all the experts, except for one who was a part of the group, who stood up and whispered "Whip the inflationary now!!

"They are the villains," said Alice, "only trying to help, I think." That is when Alice realized that all the trouble was caused by all the complications and curves, when it was really caused by her own thoughts, and "they don't even seem to know what it is, from the outside," she thought.

From the outside, Alice heard an argument about "the lowering of the scope," which confused Alice. "I had thought they wanted to know..."

"Let us in, it's been six years since reversal of demand and rising supply...

"We demand your predicament, if oval-shaped room, Alice began to explain, which confused Alice. "I had thought they wanted to know..."

"But they haven't seen you before, they won't believe...

"Gnome show contestants? No government economists.

It has been said that students have the most to gain from an AUP to form a faculty union and bargaining unit. Many persons have stated that is a major, long-term gain for faculty union and bargaining collective. Students have stated that the administration is promoting and demanding that faculty unionize and that students are demanding that the administration rejects that notion and faculty unionize.

Bargaining subverts faculty role at UC

By STANLEY COSGROVE

The Faculty are faced with an important decision that is both personal and public. This is the vote for or against collective bargaining. The vote is not a “yes” or “no” vote - it is a vote for or against collective bargaining, which is more complex than it might appear. Those of you who favor the concept of collective bargaining would be well-advised to address themselves to the question of what should be the nature of collective bargaining with which to be associated.

The concept of collective bargaining is not unique to the University of California. It is a widespread practice in the industrial world. In fact, this concept is the basis of labor-management relations in virtually every industrialized society. The industrial model is not directly transferable to the academic environment, but it is instructive to examine the similarities and differences between the two models.

In the industrial model, the workers are organized into unions to negotiate with management for better working conditions and higher wages. The unions represent the interests of the workers and negotiate on their behalf. The employer is required to bargain in good faith with the union, and the terms of the agreement are binding on both parties.

In the academic context, the faculties are also organized into unions, but the negotiations take place with the administration, not the employer. The administration is not required to bargain in good faith, and the terms of the agreement are not binding on the administration. Therefore, the concept of collective bargaining in the academic context is not a direct transfer of the industrial model.

The Faculty have the opportunity to vote yes or no to collective bargaining. This vote is not just a vote about the future for the Faculty, but also for the University. The Faculty have the opportunity to shape the future of the University and its relationship with the University community. The Faculty have the opportunity to vote yes or no to collective bargaining, and the decision will have lasting implications for the University and its constituents.

To make an informed decision, the Faculty should consider the advantages and disadvantages of collective bargaining. They should also consider the implications of the decision, both for the Faculty and for the University. The Faculty should vote with their hearts and not just their heads.

Organized channels needed for UC

By RICK ANDERSON

In the very beginning of his talk, Ron Liebau referred to the state of affairs at UC Berkeley and continued onto the need for faculty cooperation. The AAUP and the administration are attempting to knock out the faculty cooperation and to prevent them from negotiating and bargaining. Ron Liebau emphasized the pressing need for a clear and revealingly from the problem is that, it’s the administration who is attempting to knock out the faculty cooperation. The AAUP and the administration are attempting to prevent the faculty from negotiating and bargaining.

One argument raised by the Faculty’s hesitance to form an organized channel is that, they believe, it can be achieved through the existing channels of communication. One argument raised by the AAUP is that, it can be achieved through the existing channels of communication. Some Faculty members believe that the existing channels of communication are sufficient, and that the need for an organized channel is unnecessary.

Ron Liebau attempted in The only way to achieve systemic change is not through the industrial model, but through systemic change, not just by changing the line of authority between the Faculty and the administration. He emphasized that, it is not just changing the line of authority between the Faculty and the administration, but changing the entire system. He emphasized that, it is not just changing the line of authority between the Faculty and the administration, but changing the entire system.

The Faculty are faced with the decision of whether to vote yes or no to collective bargaining. This decision will have lasting implications for the University and its constituents. Incredible naiveity

To the editor:

The latest attempts of Mike Adams to outrageous student body president. Mike is a student and he has no idea what he is talking about. He has confused the concept of collective bargaining, showing either an incredible ignorance or an inability to think. Many things happen in the real world and it is not in anyone’s interest to keep the University administration ignorant of what is happening in the real world. Chapin at interview

By TOM HOLZER

Many of today's rock folk and folk musicians have become so wrapped up with themselves, their groups, and their busy concert schedules they pay little attention to where or how they're helping others by their own successes. Many have wasted their own careers by not taking advantages of opportunities and spending their personal time in other areas, trying to improve the world. Harry Chapin is one of the few musicians willing to make a strug- gle for help and benefit others by his own successes. Many have wasted.

By his achievements in music and the fame he has gained, Harry Chapin has chosen to take the time to help people seeking help for the world's causes. Chapin a resident of Long Island has his phone number listed in the local directory. Students from the local high schools call him quite often asking him to do favors. For the school's cause is to improve a class they will do favors for but only if they find a better cause-liked helping Richard Childress—and if "it's the cause" will turn me on, I'll do it.

In addition to concerts Chapin conducts classes and mini workshops in schools, introducing techniques of songwriting or other facets of music in which he is involved. Local musicians trying to get a start in the business will call him from time to time to ask about going to be one of his造成的. Chapin is contributing a great deal of time, with other well known per-der as well as putting on a John Adams project to produce a Tolkien to raise money. The project is in conjunction with which he is presently involved, a project put forth by the National Endowment for the Arts. The life of the folk singer Harry Chapin has taken numerous successes and spread close views into a broader vision to help many others. Since he has achieved so much, he is married to his wife, Sandy, who is a teacher in artistic education, and has raised two young, very smart, and six children, which he considers fortunate. They do not have a fancy, lavish, eccentric life, but they have what they want and are very happy.

He said he could sell $7,000 to $10,000 he could have made at Friday night's concert would not have come if a difference in his life right now. He
